Youth Radio is coming of age

Eastbourne Youth Radio returns to the airwaves this month on 87.7FM and www.eyr.org.uk in association with Sussex Downs College

Eastbourne Youth Radio (EYR) has reached adulthood, celebrating its 16th year in 2016. The popular radio station, organised by Eastbourne Education Business Partnership (EEBP) returns to the airwaves on 87.7FM and online at www.eyr.org.uk from Wednesday 16th-Friday 18th November, broadcast from Sussex Downs College, Eastbourne.

Students from 25 Eastbourne schools and other organisations each present an hour-long radio show across the three days. The students, who range in age five to 19, will present programmes on a range of topics and in a variety of formats. Expect music, poetry, plays, interviews and debates.

This year's EYR coincides with Anti-Bullying Week 2016, the theme of which is 'Power for Good'. Some of the schools will be exploring this topic through their shows, using the power of the airwaves to demonstrate 'Power for Good'.

For the third year running, EYR is broadcast in partnership with the Sussex Police and Crime Commissioner (PCC), Katy Bourne. The EEBP received a grant from the PCC's Safer in Sussex Community Fund to support and broadcast EYR. Tim Sorensen, EYR manager, has been running the EYR project from the start. He says about Katy Bourne's involvement: "The Sussex PCC will be helping to address the issue of bullying and garner more attention around young people's mental health needs. Katy Bourne is an active campaigner and has often praised EYR for its insightful projects 'benefitting the entire community and businesses'."

EYR gives youngsters control over the airwaves in a producer and presenter capacity. "The employability skills you learn from producing original radio shows are transferable to any workplace environment," Tim continues. "If you have a passion for producing or presenting then this is definitely the project for you. For students who don't want to speak on air, the teamwork skills and planning of the projects are all a fantastic experience. There really is something in it for everyone."

EYR is made possible by local businesses who sponsor each show. The high quality of sponsors involved with the programming give the students the inspiration to produce a quality and informative show. Among the sponsors this year are Stone Cross Nurseries, Caffyns, Eastbourne Arndale Shopping Centre, East Sussex Fire & Rescue Service and University of Brighton.

ESFRS Station Commander, Mark Webb, said, "East Sussex Fire and Rescue Service is proud to be sponsoring Eastbourne Youth Radio again this year."

"This year we have two key messages to share through EYR which are road safety and water safety. It is widely acknowledged that younger drivers are at greater risk of death or injury on the roads.

"Both of these issues are particularly relevant for the students of Sussex Downs College [ESFRS sponsor their show] as many of them are learning to drive and approaching the legal age to consume alcohol."

Highlights across the three days include the flagship show, 'Answer Back'. The popular panel show features local politicians and business professionals taking questions from students on subjects both local and national. Expect Brexit to feature!

Back by popular demand is the hour-long 'Meet the Media' panel where students get to quiz industry experts on what it takes to build a career in the Media.

As EYR celebrates its move into adulthood, the standard has been set high. "Every year the quality of the shows increase," says Tim, "and this year is no exception. This is definitely the year to tune in."

EYR whatever the weather

EYR will again be providing hourly forecast updates so listeners can prepare for the day in advance. This is possible thanks to local sponsors, members of The Best of Eastbourne website: Alandale Plant Ltd, Cooden Tax Consulting and Artemi Photography.

Knowing the weather is an essential part of each day, students will be using specialised weather equipment that will be stationed at Sussex Downs College to provide you will regular updates. Students participating in EYR will receive demonstrations on how to correctly read the weather equipment," says EYR Manager Tim Sorensen. "These updates will consist of Eastbourne and the surrounding areas, ensuring listeners don't get caught out this month. The weather is essential to any radio station and EYR will be no different. This is a fantastic experience for the students."

The Eastbourne Community Safety Partnership is formed from a number of community groups, voluntary and statutory agencies. It brings people together to tackle crime, the fear of crime, and anti-social behaviour within the Borough to help create an even safer place to live, work and visit.

For more information about the agencies involved, and to read about the work of the partnership, visit the Community Safety pages on the Eastbourne Borough Council's website, addressed below.

Students take on BBC presenter's news bootcamp

Eastbourne Youth Radio wouldn't be complete without its supporting events and 2016 is no exception with the return of the Newsroom Bootcamp. Hosted by John Young (BBC South East Today and John Young Media), the Newsroom Bootcamp took place at the Congress Suite, Eastbourne, on Wednesday 19th October. The interactive morning saw 45 students from local schools gain expertise and insight into a working newsroom.

Students enhanced their employability skills by exploring key industry roles including researchers, producers, newsreaders and camera crew. Whilst the focus was on jobs in the newsroom environment, the skills gained included teamwork, communication, written work, time management and presentation, making it relatable to any workplace.

As part of the bootcamp, students were asked: 'what makes the news?' whether it be something new, different, serious, significant, weird, or extraordinary. Using these as starting points alongside typical news values, students were taught to prepare headlines which they later presented. Alongside this, students were asked to react efficiently and effectively to breaking news. They learnt to adapt their broadcast to the new developments they were given by John, boosting students' organisational skills.

Working to tight deadlines throughout this task ensured the students concentrated and were engaged constantly.

The final segment of the day provided students with an entirely new skill by the introduction of an autocue demonstration. This proceeded with all the pupils having a practice reading from the professional autocue equipment. Building confidence in the students' presenting abilities was paramount during this task. The day concluded with students combining their newly acquired techniques to read, film and watch back their own news broadcast.

Speaking about the event John said: "As always at this event, I was struck by just how sharp and engaged many of the children were. I wasn't there to turn them all into journalists -- but I was there to make them think about the world around them, to think quickly, write powerfully and step out of their comfort zones in front of my video camera. Most of them embraced that; it's always a pleasure to watch it unfolding."

In total six local schools (St John's Meads, Tollgate, Stafford, Stone Cross, Pevensey & Westham and Polegate) all participated in the Newsroom Bootcamp Challenge. Each school attended a 90-minute session that was repeated twice during the day.

John currently appears two days a week on BBC South East Today reporting and presenting the local news. The rest of the week John delivers his John Young Media Newsroom Bootcamp workshops. John not only offers these workshops to local schools but local businesses can now also reap the benefits of these activities. The workshops provide great team building and confidence boosting activities for staff, plus they're office-based, saving managers the hassle of booking an activity centre. Twitter: @johnyoungmedia

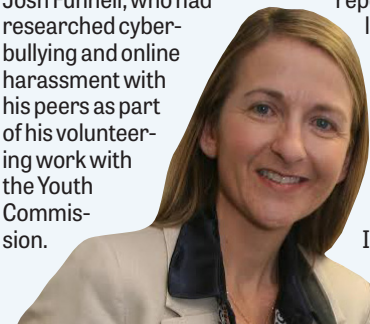

Police chief supports key project

Recognising the great impact the event has on young people and the community, Sussex Police & Crime Commissioner Katy Bourne has come on board as the lead partner for 2016 for the third year in a row.

Through supportive funding from her Safer in Sussex Community Fund (SiSCF) Katy Bourne supports the EYR Launch Mix programme on Wednesday 16 November from 10am. Mrs Bourne said: "Eastbourne Youth Radio (EYR) is a well-established and respected local project which I'm very pleased to support through my Community Safety Fund. Every year the radio provides a unique opportunity for young people to engage with their communities and speak out on local issues. This year I had the pleasure of being interviewed by broadcasting students Aiden and Alan from Sussex Downs College. The interview was about bullying and the distressing consequences it can have on a young person's self-esteem and mental health. I was joined in the interview by one of my Youth Commission Members, Josh Funnell, who had researched cyber-bullying and online harassment with his peers as part of his volunteering work with the Youth Commission.

Josh was able to share some of his research and findings on why this is a growing problem and why many young people don't feel that it is being taken seriously enough. We all agreed that it is vital that victims report bullying and are encouraged to talk about it openly as opposed to suffering in silence. During the interview we also discussed the hate crime reporting app that I funded last year; the police Stop and Search video that the Youth Commission were consulted on; and the National Prevent Programme designed to stop radicalization amongst young people. I wish the EYR every success with this year's programme."

Flagship chat forum is the perfect lunchtime listening

Eastbourne Youth Radio
87.7fm
November 16-18

Eastbourne Youth Radio's second flagship show, 'Meet the Media' returns to the airwaves on Thursday 17th November at 12pm.

The perfect lunchtime listening, a guest panel of industry professionals chat to students from participating schools about getting a foot on the ladder in the media industry.

Each year, youngsters interested in pursuing a career in this profession, get the opportunity to quiz the professionals. Because of this, each year is a unique show with one common thread: the high quality of the questions.

The panel show enables the students to explore different career paths from broadcast journalism, to websites, PR, advertising and print. The face of the media has changed so much since the birth of EYR 16 years ago.

What do the Media professionals think about journalism in 2016? What will jobs look like in the future? Do the media roles these students will pursue even exist yet? How has the internet transformed news reporting? Why is radio still so important? Expect all of these questions and more!

Please note: The Meet the Media panel is correct at time of going to press and may be subject to change.

The panel: Tune in for 2016 as joining the Meet the Media panel are:

Charlie Rose - Reporter/

Presenter at BBC South East Today

Jessica Saunders - Sussex Downs College alumni
Jessica finished her Media course at the college in 2015 and is now Features Editor at The Life Media Group

Rik Scott - Group Head of Production, Media Sound Holdings since 2010 and Director, Rik Scott Creative Ltd.

Lynsey Bartlett - Heart FM Local DJ Lynsey is a familiar voice in Surrey and Sussex on the popular Heart network.

Hanna Neter - Juice FM Breakfast show presenter for Brighton's local radio station.

Holly Hubble - Sussex Downs College alumni
Holly works for production company Talkback and has been involved on many popular shows.

Young given a chance to answer back

The flagship show returns! Answer Back lets the youth of Eastbourne raise questions on a variety of topics that affect them and their future.

Eastbourne Youth Radio coincides with Anti-Bullying Week, so expect this topic to feature, alongside mental health issues, Brexit and the future Britain these young adults will grow up in, and more.

On the panel are: Caroline Ansell MP for Eastbourne and Willingdon; Katy Bourne, Sussex Police & Crime Commissioner; Stephen Holt, Business Development Manager, EDCC and EDEAL; Keith Ridley, Ambassador, Eastbourne Herald; Cllr David Tutt, Leader, Eastbourne Borough Council and Natasha Duursma, Student Union President, Sabbatical Officer and Student Governor, Sussex Downs College.

The show was recorded on Thursday 10th November to an audience of students interested in local and national politics.

Tune in to the show on Wednesday 16th November at 6pm.

Please note: The Answer Back panel is correct at the time of going to press and may be subject to change.

Devonshire Collective offers exhibitions, comedy and workshops

Devonshire Collective is an exciting creative and cultural hub in Devonshire Ward, Eastbourne. You can catch their debut EYR show on Thursday 17th November at 4pm.

The Collective is based on Seaside Road and offers studios, makerspaces, workshops, gallery and café for the benefit of artists, community members and the wider public. This includes three new venues and two associate venues, Leaf Hall and The Royal Hippodrome.

The Collective launched in October 2016 with a special Launch Programme, including exhibitions, sculpture making, comedy, music and theatre and dance workshops, and even a pie and mash themed project. As part of the programme, artists Sheila Hay and Claire Shoosmith from Eastbourne Studio Pottery are working with retailers on Seaside Road to create ceramic art works for a community project.

Devonshire Collective's first visual art exhibition is Collective: Greater Than the Sum of the Parts. The show is curated by Judith Alder and will feature works by 11 artists including herself: Hermione Allsopp, Rachel Cohen, Susannah Douglas, Axel Hesslenberg, Suzanne O'Haire, Liv Pennington, Charlotte Still, Clare Whistler, Victoria Threlfall and Alexandra Vay. It runs 9

December to 7 January.

Devonshire Collective has been made possible by funding from Eastbourne Borough Council, Eastbourne Housing Investment Company, Coastal Community Fund, Devonshire West Big Local and Arts Council England.

Looking toward a Big Future

The Big Futures Show returns to the Winter Garden, Eastbourne, on 22nd March 2017. The popular employability and skills event attracts students from across East Sussex and features around 100 exhibitors who showcase their businesses to tomorrow's workforce.

Eastbourne Youth Radio encourages youngsters to consider the opportunities available to them after school. Through 'Meet the Media' and 'Answer Back', students are given advice on pursuing careers in the media and politics. The radio shows themselves offer students invaluable practical experience on writing, producing and presenting. The Big Futures Show goes one step further as different industry areas are showcased throughout the event.

The Big Futures Show is organised by Eastbourne Education Business Partnership (EBP) in association with Eastbourne Borough Council. The EBP is also responsible for Eastbourne Youth Radio.

Alistair Barron, from The Eastbourne EBP, comments: "Eastbourne Education

Business Partnership is delighted to have two major events in the East Sussex education calendar: EYR and The Big Futures Show, our Skills and Employability show at the Winter Garden on 22nd March next year.

"The Big Futures Show has shot to prominence in the East Sussex education calendar after this year's first event. Schools across East Sussex were asking to book again straight after this year's show!"

"Several major sponsors have already committed to the show including Eastbourne Borough Council, Sussex Downs College, Bexhill 6th Form College and NHS Health Education England. Discussions are in hand that will bring others very soon and we will be able to tell you more about them throughout Eastbourne Youth Radio."

These events highlight the opportunities available to young adults across East Sussex and enables them to seriously consider their next steps, from GCSE options, to Further Education and beyond.

'Changing Minds' in anti-bullying week

Anti-Bullying Week coincides with the EYR project and a subject at the heart of many participating schools' programmes. Now Charity is sponsor of Sussex Downs College's early morning show on Thursday 17th November, 4am-7am. The programme will include information on Now Charity's 'Changing Minds' community project, and address the fact that bullying isn't just about physical scars.

Mind in Brighton and Hove has launched a Wellbeing in Hastings & Eastbourne Project to further promote awareness.

The charity has been given funding to run a pilot project providing a mental health pop-up resource in the two towns. Their target groups are young people with the aim of providing resources and information about mental health and signpost local or national services.

Mind Charity, Now Charity and other EYR sponsors and schools are working to address bullying through programming. Tips on improving wellbeing and resilience is at the forefront, turning an often taboo subject into one that's addressed and fighting back with a vengeance.

Each year, Eastbourne Youth Radio works with primary schools, secondary schools and in partnership with Sussex Downs College students. One project runs alongside the programming and coincides with Global Entrepreneurship Week: Business Start Up Projects.

Christina Ewbank, CEO at Eastbourne & District Enterprise Agency (EDEAL), is programme sponsor of West Rise Junior School, whose programme airs

at 9am on Thursday 17th November. Last year, the students were involved with creating mini enterprise projects, with nothing but £5 and their creative ideas to make it happen. The school hopes to use EYR again in 2016 as a platform to launch further Mini Enterprise Projects in the new year in conjunction with EDEAL. Money raised from the start-ups were donated to charities chosen by the West Rise Juniors.

Pupils from The Haven School showcase their entrepreneurial side
